We Got All the Reports—But One
Something to Write a Congressman About

I never thought I would live to see the day when an editor wrote his congressman about NOT receiving a government report. But it looks as though we have waded through reams of government broadcasts from a hundred bureaus only to miss the one report that was readable and likely to be printed.

Japs Believed Planning Drive Against Java

Air Raid on Batavia, NEI Capital, Considered a Prelude

BATAVIA —(P)—Japanese planes made their first raid of the Pacific war on Batavia, capital of the Netherlands East Indies, Monday in an intensifying series of air attacks believed to be a prelude to an attempt at invasion of Java, center of the United Nations' resistance to the Japanese in the southwest Pacific.

The raid, carried out by six to eight Jap fighters, was directed mainly at Kema and Tjilatjap air bases, near Batavia. Anita news agency said the attacks were limited to machine-gunning and no bombs were dropped. Streets in the capital and suburbs were also strafed.

"Some damage" was done to army planes at Kema and two passenger planes were damaged.

A special communiqué said two civilians were seriously wounded and nine slightly hurt. At least one and possibly two of the raiders were shot down.

Japanese efforts to attack the harbor were turned back by heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Enemy activity also was reported over other parts of Java, Sumatra and Borneo.

The NEI high command said Japanese patrols were pushing south from the charred oil port of Balikpapan, on the east Borneo coast, "apparently planning to reach Banjer-massin," important trade center on the south shore of Borneo facing Java.

The port was said to be a prime Japanese objective as the men of Nippon attempted to force an are around the vital citadel of Java in preparation for invasion.

Proving Ground Bracketed by New Projects

One Road to Blevins; and a Paved Road Direct to Washington

Four State Highway-U. S. Bureau of Public Roads projects for paved or dustless highways in Hempstead county are in the hands of County Judge Fred Luck with only right-of-way matters to be cleared up before actual contract is let, the judge announced Monday.

If property owners co-operate in granting right-of-way all four projects may be let at the next contract meeting of the State Highway Commission, Judge Luck said.

The projects, on which blueprints are now on file at the judge's office in Hempstead county courthouse, are:

1. Paving, from the end of the present city paving on No. 29-North to the Southwestern Proving Ground gate about two miles above Hope.
2. A dust-proof road from this Proving Ground gate around the Proving Ground to intersect with No. 29 about a quarter mile above the north Proving Ground gate, about six miles of construction, for which the appropriation is $130,000.
3. Paving on No. 4-North, from the beginning of the narrow present paving inside the Hope city limits to the end of this narrow paving, reconstructing the present pavement on the old Washington highway.
4. Paving, from the end of the present narrow paving on No. 4-North to Washington on the original route of No. 4 through the Proving Ground.

Otis D. Page, Commissioner of Lands, Dies

Interim Appointment to Office to Be Made by Governor Adkins

He had been at home since July when he suffered a heart seizure.

Another brother, A. H. Alf, who died last May, also was prominent in politics. Under former Gov. Carl Bailey he was chairman of the State Corporation Commission.

In 1901 Page came to Arkansas and in 1911 was employed as an inspector in the state department of mines, manufactures and agriculture. He stayed in that department until 1915, serving under three commissioners including his brother.

After living in Oklahoma for a time Page was in Washington as a pure food inspector from 1919 to 1921. Returning here he entered the mercantile business and operated sawmills and cotton gins until 1933 when he was appointed superintendent of the Pulaski county farm.

In 1936 Page resigned to run for land commissioner and was elected. He was re-elected in 1938 and 1940.

Civil Defense Drive Is Slow

Only 13 Register Up to Noon Monday; 2 Days to Go

Hempstead county's three-day drive to enroll volunteer workers for Civilian Defense got under way beneath leaden skies and a downpour of rain Monday—and up to noon only 13 persons had been added to the Civilian Defense rolls.

A total of about 3,000 persons are required to man the various organizations grouped under Civilian Defense, and with 17 previously reported the total today is only 30, Chairman Talbot Field, Jr., announced.

Three women volunteered Monday morning. The first was Mrs. Albert Wadsworth, wife of the mayor, and the others were Mrs. Lamar Cox and Mrs. Nell Cox.

Army officials are pushing this section of the country to get its Civilian Defense organization perfected, including the vital system of Air raid Wardens which has already been completed on both coasts and far inland, Mr. Field announced.

Registration of volunteer workers is being made at Hope city hall this Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, February 9-11. The office is the first door to the right on entering the city hall from the south (opposite Hotel Barlow). Two secretaries will enroll all volunteers.

2% Is Denied Co. Treasurer

Supreme Court Holds Against Carroll Co. Treasurer

LITTLE ROCK —(P)—The Supreme court held Monday that the 1941 act allowing county treasurers 2 per cent of the funds they handle merely created a source of revenue from which the treasurer's salary fixed by previous legislative or initiated county salary acts should be paid.

Affirming the Carroll circuit court the high tribunal said Act 78 of 1941 was not a salary act and did not repeal any legislative or initiated acts fixing salaries of county treasurers.

Man Held in Death of Girl

Tragic Story Unfolded to Clark County Officers

ARKADELPHIA —(P)—An autopsy was ordered today to determine what caused the death of 19-year-old Mary Bell Furlow whose chain-bound scantily-clad body was recovered by officers Sunday night from the Ouachita River at Calion, 61 miles southwest of here.

Sheriff Bill Wells said he and other officers were directed to the spot where the body of the pretty bookkeeper was found in 21 feet of water by a 37-year-old man. The man Wells added, told them he placed it there after the girl died on grindstone mountain near here a week ago following an attempted self-operation.

"He said she died within 15 minutes but before she died she asked him to dispose of her body," the sheriff said.

"The man said he obtained long chains, wrapped her with them, drove her to Calion and placed her body in the river."

Hand-to-Hand Fighting in Jungle Section

Australians Counter-Attack, But Concede Japs Have Foothold

By The Associated Press

The Japanese fought their way into the fortress island of Singapore on a 10-mile front Monday, threatening to overrun the once-powerful British base, but after several hours of bloody fighting the situation was reported officially to be "well in hand."

That word came from Major General Henry Gordon Bennett, commander of the Australian forces in whose zone in the mangrove swamps and rubber plantations of the north-west shore the invaders first struck.

"We have taken our stand on a strong line and are organizing an attack which it is hoped will recover as much as possible of the lost terrain," Bennett said, thus holding out that slim hope that the Japanese could be readily dislodged.

Battle in Jungle

A strong Japanese landing had turned Singapore's ordeal of shell fire and bombs in the past week of siege from the opposite shore of Johore Strait into a man-to-man, weapon-to-weapon struggle.

The Japs declared that their beach heads were so well consolidated that tanks already had been ferried across to bolster their troops.

While this seemed quite possible there was no confirmation from Singapore.

Likewise unconfirmed was a roundabout report that Jap parachutists had been dumped behind forward defense positions and already had engaged a British detachment.

The parachutist story—via Tokio, the Oslo radio and Reuters said also the Japanese fleet was ready for attacks near Singapore "at any moment" in such a heavy as 18 inches might well get in their first good licks for they were primarily designed to cover the sea approaches.

MacArthur Holds On

In the battle of the Batan in the Philippines General MacArthur announced his men had repulsed new Jap assaults while the U. S. guns in Manila bay silenced several siege batteries on the Cavite shore to the south.

Once again the war department communique was a story of all attacks repulsed despite the dive bombers which roved the sky in blasting support of the invader ground.

A London informant said the British had opened a sharp counter-attack on the Japs attacking Singapore island.

He said that the invasion was launched on a 10-mile front across the Strait of Johore with the drive pivoting on Behr inlet, at a narrow stretch of the strait.

British headquarters acknowledged that the forces which clinched a beach-head during the night on the northwest coast were spreading eastward despite the fierce defense.

The Japs' Story

Japanese artillery on the Malayan mainland was firing shot away and Japanese dive bombers helped blast a path for the attacking Japs—shock troops and, according to Tokio, a tank force.

Other air raiders appeared over Singapore city on the south side of the island but these were met by British fighters which destroyed three planes, probably destroyed three more, and damaged 13 more.

The Tokio radio, relaying dispatches which it said originated with land forces on Singapore, pictured the defenders as in flight on the highways leading to the southern part of the island.

One report said the first landing was signaled at 12:15 a. m. (12:15 p. m. Central War-time Sunday) with a green flare, which was followed in four minutes by a red flare to signify the completion of that operation.

More trustworthy indications were that at least 60,000 men were on Singapore to oppose the headlong rush by the Japanese troops who had pushed the length of the Malayan mainland to Johore Strait since the start of the war in the Pacific.

"THE BIG WIND—"

CHAPTER XXXI

HENDY flew back to report, and brought word to the sheriff that Loren Oliver was ready to face trial any time the governor would guarantee his safety.

"Looks like we wouldn't need him," Mowry said.

"How's that again?" I said.

"Bixie Croft has lit out for the hills. He talked too much. The bullet that killed my Cousin Maurice didn't fit Prof. Oliver's gun. It did fit Bixie's. No, I don't reckon there'll be any further trouble for the Prof. But I reckon he'd better be gettin' back here. Pretty quick, too."

He gave me the meaningful eye. Fortunately Hendy didn't take any notice. He was explaining to Judd that his orders were to fly her down to Charleston where the yacht had put in. She went in to finish packing.

"What's about this cruise, Hendy?" I asked him. "Is it a plant to get Judd back into the Kent family?"

He shook his head, and looked quite melancholy, for him. "Not a hope," he said. "I can take it when I'm licked. Don't let her marry Todd, though. It'll never work."

"Make your mind easy, pal," I said. "She isn't having any of Angel."

The helicopter took off, leaving a large vacant spot in the mid of my riff, if you get me. I missed Doc as much as Judd. Imagine me, Mom Baumer, the old road tramp, getting herself all wound up in domestic ties!

IN a few days the Sears murder was in the clear. The grand jury indicted Bixie Croft—and find him if you can. One rainy morning in comes Doc, looking for his breakfast. His first question was about Judd.

"She's on a cruise," I said. "Is she all right?"

"Sure, she's all right."

"Does she need me for anything?"

"No, she doesn't need you."

"Well, I thought—were you sure? I mean—has Todd—did the man—Is she married?" He'd finally succeeded in getting it out.

"Not more than usual. Not as much, in fact. Hendy is putting through the divorce."

"Because of that?" he said very quick and sharp.

"Hendy doesn't know," I said. "Doc, I don't know how I'm going to get her back. She's lost her taste for this place."

"Because I'm here?"

"I reckon it's mainly because of the Hanging Tree. I'm no nervous Natalie. Doc, but there's times when I think how close a call it was for you and Old Swoby and—well, I see things, too, passing the bend."

"The tree won't stand forever," he said.

"God send the big wind that'll blow it down!" I said.

"Would she come back then?"

"I wouldn't wonder a mite," I said. "Stick around and see."

He shook his head. "I'm leavin' as soon as I can get things cleaned up."

"Huh? What about your Wandos?"

"No more Wandos."

"Dead Injuns is correct," he said. "What I took to be a settlement turned out to be only a burial ground. A sort of private cemetery."

"I'll say it's a cemetery!" I said. "Tombstones for Tambay."

"I don't follow you, Mom."

"You haven't paid off the note yet, have you?"

"No. It isn't due till the first."

"Well, if the Wando lode is played out, you'd be a sucker to waste your four grand. It don't stand to reason."

He put his hand on my shoulder for a second. "What's reason between friends, Mom?" he said.

"Doc," I said, "why don't you use that smile more often? It'd get you elected President of the United States. I wouldn't wonder. Another thing: are you sure it's all for me that you're doing this?"

He didn't answer for a minute. Then he said, "Well, Mom, I'll take a little time to clear my mind of Tambay after I leave, and I'd hate to have to think of Tambay without Judd."

"Uh-huh," I said. "It's as bad as that, is it, Doc?"

"It's pretty bad, Mom," he said. "And when'll you be leavin'?"

"In about three weeks. I'm fixing up the stockade as a small field museum."

THAT night came a big wind. Through it, I kept hearing sounds I didn't understand. Doc and Swoby showed up at breakfast with swollen hands.

"Don't you boys have any sense?" I said. "You've been in prison oak again."

"Not this time," Doc said. "Those are honest axe blisters."

"Axx!" I said. "What skulduggery have you been up to?"

"In your own phrase, take a gander," Doc said. He pointed toward the bend in the road.

"Hellfire and camphire!" I said, for there wasn't any Hanging Tree. "Did you fool out it down?"

"We couldn't wait for God's big wind," Doc said and grinned.

"I smell trouble," I said. "They'll run you out of the country, on a rail."

Doc shook his head. "They won't do a thing. You don't understand those Southerners, Mom. Underneath any prejudices there's a sense of fundamental justice. Anyone else who touched that tree would be in for serious trouble. Not Swoby and I, though."

"I get you," I said. "Because they were going to hang you on it."

"Exactly," he said. "We left the axe sticking in the stump. It was my initials on it. My theory is, as Judd would say, that we'll never hear a word about it. She'll come back now, won't she, Mom?"

"If I have to rope and hogtie her," I said. "We've still got a fight on our hands, though. You'd better stay and help."

"What's the trouble now?" he wanted to know.

"Mowry. When he finds out about the gold, he's liable to be so sore that he'll put the bridge through out of natural cussedness."

"Oh!" Doc said. "I don't think Mowry will get very far with his bridge."

He ducked into the stockade and brought out a fresh painted sign.

Welliver University, Field Classes, Amerind Ethnology III, Tuesdays and Fridays, 3-5 P. M. Associate Professor Warrand.

"What kind of a rabbit comes out of that hat, Doc?" I asked him.

"One that will bite your fat friend with the badge," he said. "I'm turning over the new lease to Welliver."

"So what?" I said.

"So an old proviso that I happened to recall seeing when I was looking up matters connected with the lease. Here's a copy, in case Mr. Sheriff Mowry drops in."

It was a honey, that law. The gist of it was that no condemnation proceedings for roads or anything else would work in the case of "lands or holdings used for burial grounds or church services, or employed in the active prosecution of public education."

BEER HAS AN HONORABLE PLACE IN AMERICA'S HISTORY

HOLD THAT TRADITION . . .

When this Committee was organized two years ago, we made a pledge to the people of Arkansas—"Law breaking, wherever it involves the sale of beer in Arkansas, MUST STOP!"

To date, the Committee has inspected more than 2,300 retail beer places. Only a few—68—were found out of line with the high standards of Arkansas' valuable beer industry. When this Committee cited this minority to law enforcement authorities, their licenses were revoked. A beer license is no shield for irresponsibles!

British Protest Spanish Riots

See Axis Pointing for New Drive Upon Morocco

By the Associated Press
The battle of diplomacy and propaganda for strategic positions in the Mediterranean overshadowed actual fighting there Monday with the British charging the Axis with sponsoring native outbreaks against them in Spanish Morocco.
London disclosed that a strong protest had been lodged with the commander of the Spanish military forces in Tangier over "Axis-inspired" riots among Moslem natives following the explosion of a time bomb for which the propagandists with remarkable accuracy blamed the British.
An authoritative London source said attention of the Spanish government probably would be directed to its attempts to embitter British-Spanish relations. Spain conceivably would be forced into war by Germany in Italy, old time beneficiaries of the present Nationalist government of Generalissimo Franco.
The inflammatory trend of Axis propaganda over the Tangier incident suggested that this was Adolf Hitler's objective.
Actual warfare in the Mediterranean region was marked by an Axis report of a raid on the British naval base at Alexandria, Egypt, new air attacks on Malta, and claims that its airmen had scattered British aerial columns in eastern Libya.
The Axis admitted a new RAF attack on Tripoli.
By and large, the British appeared to have checked the German-Italian offensive in Libya about 40 miles west of Tobruk. The Axis offered no new claims of ground gains.
Marryat used the slang expression, "as a bone," as early as 1833.

Nutrition Group Holds Session

Has Conducted 7 Cooking Schools Over County

The County Consumer's Interest and Nutrition Committee, a part of the County Defense Board, had their monthly meeting February 5 in the city hall.

The committee members present were: Mrs. Mary Foster, Miss Elsie Wisenberger, Miss Ruth Taylor, Mrs. Marie Nichols, Mrs. Mary Turner, Mrs. Laura Hodnett, Mrs. Harry Shiver, Mrs. H. O. Kyles, Mrs. L. D. Springer and Miss Phoebe Harris. The meeting was presided over by the chairman, Miss Mary Claude Fletcher.

This committee, since it has been organized, has conducted seven cooking schools over the county through Home Demonstration Clubs; has posters of "eat the right foods" in most of the grocery stores and eating places of Hope; has made a survey of prices of food over the county; has assisted with the hot lunch project over the county; kept timely articles on foods and nutrients before the public. This committee will continue with their work each week. Certain teams will keep timely publicity before the public. There will be a team to serve each week of the month and a column in the paper will be headed Foods for Defense. This committee is urging every one to cooperate with the school shortage; to assist with the hot school lunch project in the schools by giving your time and your cooperation to the supervisors; to do careful buying; to buy foods that will give the most food values and not for likes and dislikes of the family.

Whole grain cereals are very essential in our diets at present time because of vitamin B1 and B2. Brown rice, whole oat meal, whole ground corn meal (especially yellow corn meal), whole wheat breads, graham flour, rice polish, soy bean products are rich in these vitamins.

A nutrition shelf will be available in the County Library in the City Hall. Any one having books on nutrition foods for family we will be glad to get your donation of books to place on the shelf for public use. Food and Nutrition classes will be taught as soon as people register for Food and Nutrition Work. On the fourth Monday of February, February 23 all interested women in the City

Model Planes Needed by Navy

High School Students to Be Asked to Build Them

NEW ORLEANS — High school students in Arkansas will be given an opportunity to participate in a vital part of the U. S. Navy training program by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Under a new plan, 500,000 aircraft models—10,000 models each of 50 different types of fighting planes—will be needed for training personnel in aircraft recognition, range estimation in gunnery practice and civilian defense training. The Navy soon will call on Arkansas students to build at least 5,000 of them.

The United States Office of Education, which will administer the program, will send letters outlining the plan to state superintendents within the next few days. The first set of working drawings will be in the hands of cooperating schools by Feb. 23.

The models will be made on a precise scale of 1 to 72—one inch on the model represents 6 feet on the actual airplane. The same proportion holds true as to distance; a model seen at 35 feet is identical with the true airplane seen at just under half a mile. Studying the models through the standard ring sight used an aerial gun mounts becomes invaluable training for the cadet flier, teaching him not only type and identification, but range. Only three dimensional models can serve properly for all these functions.

After a review of every model submitted, students completing stated quantities of models, will receive certificates in recognition of the importance of the work. Approved models will be sent to aviation units ashore and afloat.

The Boy Scouts of America, the of Hope are requested to meet at the City Hall to organize Home Demonstration Clubs for North and South Hope. These Home Demonstration Clubs will be turned into Food and Nutrition Clubs and classes. Any one wishing information on Consumer's Interest and Food and Nutrition please get in touch with the Chairman of this Committee, Mary Claude Fletcher, County Home Demonstration Agent.

Wife Outlives the Husband, as a Rule

NEW YORK — When a man marries he not only gives a hostage to fortune but, barring divorce, he makes a contract that in most instances will bind him for life, unless his bride is a few years his senior. For, according to the statistics of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, if a man is the same age as his wife, or older, her chances of outliving him are better than even. And as the difference in the ages of a woman and her older husband increases, the chances of outliving his wife grow less.

A man whose wife is three or four years his senior, however, can expect that he and his spouse have about the same length of life ahead of them, the statisticians say. But when the mates are of equal age, the wife has better than an even chance of outliving her husband; to be exact, her chances are 55 in 100. If the husband is five years the senior, however, his chances of outliving his wife are only 36 in 100, and when his seniority is as much as ten years, his chances drop to 27 in 100.

On the other hand, when a man is five years younger than his mate, his chances of outliving her are 55 in 100.

off in taxes. Congress is working on this. It can't work too fast or too thoroughly.
Third, it is to be presumed that the shock that must have run through the whole Army and Navy command at the deficiencies that led up to Pearl Harbor more or less assures that the same mistakes won't happen again immediately. The appointment of supreme commanders in the Pacific war zones with full authority, and of the new AEF in Britain, with all branches responsible to them, indicates that the danger of lack of coordination has been sensed and partially remedied.

That's good, but not enough. The whole military setup, and the whole habit of military thinking must be revamped to fit modern conditions, and that as quickly as possible without fatal confusion. Here again the revelation of the whole truth is of the greatest service.
A free people can function only by knowing the truth. The greatest possible service has been done by these three brutally frank reports.

We want to know the worst. It's when we've been told the worst that we start doing something about making it better.
